

For faine she would him haue
And here bargaining him foond about.
With courage strong and stout.
He cryed my hartes trill till.

For faine for faine what do you in
your husbande thus to bang:
The better you shall be the more.

For faine for faine what do you in
your husbande thus to bang:
The better you shall be the more.
For faine for faine what do you in
your husbande thus to bang:
The better you shall be the more.
For faine for faine what do you in
your husbande thus to bang:
The better you shall be the more.

For faine for faine what do you in
your husbande thus to bang:
The better you shall be the more.
For faine for faine what do you in
your husbande thus to bang:
The better you shall be the more.
For faine for faine what do you in
your husbande thus to bang:
The better you shall be the more.

For faine for faine what do you in
your husbande thus to bang:
The better you shall be the more.
For faine for faine what do you in
your husbande thus to bang:
The better you shall be the more.
For faine for faine what do you in
your husbande thus to bang:
The better you shall be the more.

For faine for faine what do you in
your husbande thus to bang:
The better you shall be the more.

And thou quoth for faine what do you in
your husbande thus to bang:
The better you shall be the more.
For faine for faine what do you in
your husbande thus to bang:
The better you shall be the more.
For faine for faine what do you in
your husbande thus to bang:
The better you shall be the more.

For faine for faine what do you in
your husbande thus to bang:
The better you shall be the more.
For faine for faine what do you in
your husbande thus to bang:
The better you shall be the more.
For faine for faine what do you in
your husbande thus to bang:
The better you shall be the more.

FINIS.

Printed for And. or W. bite at the sign of the starre in the Church-lane in London.